

"I am now attending the University of Kansas City and am realizing more fully the value of the foundation I received at Chevy. English is my major and I find that my Chevy English survey course is standing me in particularly good stead!

"Perhaps the most vivid impression of my two years in Washington was that of a sense of unity: unity of effort in school projects, unity of purpose as we strove to translate theory into action, unity of heart whether in a hockey game, in hearing memorable music at Constitution Hall, or in the bit we did to entertain the boys at the Naval Hospital.

" . . . Above all, I find myself remembering not that 'I' but that 'We' as a group did all these things."

"Mary Holmes and I are rooming together (at the University of Kentucky), and it certainly is wonderful being with a Chevy classmate. On the average of fifty times a week something comes up that reminds us of school at Chevy, and we sit back and reminisce about the 'old days' and feel we're still there.

"It was wonderful living in a place like Washington where history is being made every minute . . . Famous speakers from all over the country spoke at many of our own Assembly programs . . . Seeing Congress in session was a thrill I'll never forget."

"During my stay at Chevy Chase I experienced the pleasure of hearing many nationally famous speakers . . . Perhaps my last day at Chevy is the one that I shall always remember most vividly. I was on my way to the church to receive my diploma. Dr. Barrows was our speaker and his topic was "Because You Came." The words he spoke that day will linger with me forever because they placed a new slant on the phase of education I had just been through.

"When I come to Washington again, it will be a happy moment when my eyes light upon that gate once more."

" My Two Years "

at CHEVY CHASE
JUNIOR COLLEGE

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

is the ideal place to continue the basic task of education for citizenship. Leaving the university free to perform its specialized work in research, professional training, and advanced study, the junior college serves both to continue and to deepen those educational processes which have been begun in earlier training. Junior college education in the National Capital presents unparalleled opportunities for the further development of the student as a well-informed, well-integrated individual.

The faculty and staff of Chevy Chase Junior College feel a deep and continuing interest in each individual student. Close relationships in a small group foster security and encourage personal development. The richness of life at Chevy Chase Junior College in the Nation's Capital has offered abundant material for these memories which are presented with pride in short excerpts from recent letters of alumnae:

"Immediately at Chevy one becomes a part of close friendships that are brought about through common relationships, scholastic and social, among students, faculty, and staff. They take place through organizations of the school, the informal after-dinner coffee gatherings, and through close harmonious living.

"Washington itself is an education which is not neglected while one is at Chevy. It is thrilling to see America's democratic government at work and to attend meetings of national importance. Our class was indeed fortunate in seeing and taking part in the inauguration ceremonies last January.

"Graduation was glorious but sad . . . as consolation, I can be thankful that behind me I leave my Alma Mater that I am proud of and that I know will give just as many cherished memories to its other students as Chevy Chase gave to me."

"During my two years at Chevy, I was too busy to sit down and think over all that it would mean to me. The years passed so rapidly, but I learned more about people and life in general than I could ever learn anywhere else in ten years. The association with girls from all over the country, as well as the splendid members of the faculty and staff, has made me realize the full value and meaning of things that made absolutely no sense to me before. I shall never forget how kindly I was treated by everyone at Chevy, and I wouldn't have given up those two years for anything in the world."

"It really does seem strange not to be packing my bags to return to Chevy. My two years there went by all too fast.

"The experience of living in Washington for two years is something I shall never forget or regret. The sightseeing trips to the interesting places in Washington as well as the trip to Williamsburg and attending the inaugural ceremonies are experiences I would never have had if I hadn't come to Chevy Chase."

BETTY LOU DOUGLAS

"My main occupation now is working for the Junior League and Orthopedic Clinic . . . have been thinking of Chevy a lot this week . . . strange not to be going back . . . now is the time I wish it were a four-year college!

"I have so many memories connected with Chevy and Washington . . . I could write a book . . . never will I forget the tours we took in Washington, the concerts at Constitution Hall, visits to the embassies, and many other events.

"The beauty of Washington in the spring with its balmy air will always be a pleasant memory . . . school days when we walked through a blaze of color . . . azaleas and the cherry blossoms.

" . . . And most of all the secure feeling of being a Senior . . . the picturesque beauty of Class Day with the Seniors in long white organdy, carrying red roses and escorted by the Juniors in pastel shades against early summer as a background and proud parents as a foreground . . . all these stand out in my memory, together with the final thrill of receiving my diploma."

MARY LU CUDLIP
Detroit, Michigan

"I love everything about Chevy Chase, and all the teachings and good advice I received there helped me to 'grow up'. After leaving I felt more mature and capable of understanding and entering the world; no longer a child but a grown woman with future responsibilities.

"I had never been so close to my teachers before, and they taught me so much more than what comes in ordinary books . . . I owe so much to them and they can be sure I will never forget them or their teachings.

"We had a lot of problems . . . which was natural being in a country that was not our own . . . Here at Chevy is a place the 'Good Neighbor' policy was certainly practiced!

"Being in Washington offered us a lot of advantages, and there was so much to learn and enjoy in the educational tours we took . . . so many places I had dreamed of seeing and they materialized at Chevy.

"The dances, Christmas and Junior-Senior banquets, May Day, Graduation and many other events will always be treasured by me."

MARITZA VILLAMIL

"For the last two days Chevy has been uppermost in my thoughts here at the University of Alabama . . . In the confusion of registration I found myself longing for the individual attention each student gets at Chevy Chase. And oh, for a student leader!

"I guess in a large University one cannot expect too much individual attention, but how I miss the secure feeling that someone is interested in me as a person . . . Chevy holds so many pleasant memories. However, at this time it is particularly the student leader at Chevy with her willingness to help the new student that is the most cherished thought in my memories."

JACQUELINE ATCHISON
Birmingham, Alabama

"Here in Switzerland (at the University of Geneva) one seems very far away . . . strange not to be back at Chevy this year walking up the drive into the front hall where friendly familiar faces are . . . but the memories will always linger.

"It was a privilege to study at Chevy for two years. There, you are an individual and not just a face. There you are part of a family . . . it's like home.

"Another poignant memory is that of the Christmas banquet when the hall is decked with holly and the Christmas tree lighted. You walk into the dining room, and girls begin to sing, carols fill the room. It is a happy time.

"Now I am graduated from Chevy and embarked on the rest of my college work in a completely new life and strange country. I wish I had the life at Chevy to live over again. It will always be dear to me,—the life I lived there and the friends I made."

JOY CORRIGAN
Geneva, Switzerland

"Some of the memories which stand out most vividly are these: being met by a student leader at Union Station and being made to feel at home right from the beginning; the friendliness of the Seniors at the table those first weeks; the sightseeing trips which helped to keep your mind off being away from home.

"The small classes and individual attention are among the things I miss most. The embassy parties, the concerts, and the chance to work in the Library of Congress were opportunities that only Washington can offer.

"The candlelight service and the lighting of the Yuletide log stand out in my memory very vividly.
